

Elizabeth Cady Stanton (1815-1902) - Suffragist, Social Activist, Abolitionist

Elizabeth Cady Stanton led America's first women's suffrage movement and was a leader in many other successful reforms that improved the lives of all Americans. "In an era of outspoken reformers, she was an innovative and radical thinker." (Griffith) In addition to suffrage, she supported boys and girls together in education, girl's sports, job training, equal wages, for women and men, labor unions, property rights for wives, child custody rights for mothers, and reform of divorce laws. Many in her generation thought of her as a revolutionary rather than a reformer.

Elizabeth Cady Stanton fought for equal rights for all Americans. Write a list of the rights you are thankful to have as an American.

Celia Cruz (1925-2003) – Cuban singer of Latin music

Known as the "Queen of Salsa," Celia Cruz was born in Cuba, leaving her native land in 1959 following the take over of Fidel Castro. For over fifty years she performed with the most famous bands. This Grammy winning artist was also known for her flashy stage costumes, colorful wigs and signature catch line "Azucaaar!" (Sugar).

Celia Cruz was known for her flashy costumes. Design a dress that Celia Cruz could wear on stage. The more colorful the better.

Madam C.J. Walker (1867–1919) – Entrepreneur, Philanthropist, and a Political and Social Activist

Through her hair product and cosmetics business, Sarah Breedlove Walker (Madam C.J. Walker) became the richest self-made woman in America. She started by selling her products door to door, but eventually established a major corporation. Madam Walker was also a very generous woman and gave money to many charities. Her company lives on today and her products are sold in national cosmetics stores like Sephora.

Write a brief description of your great idea.

Alva Vanderbilt Belmont (1853-1933) - Socialite and Suffragist

Born in Alabama, Alva Vanderbilt Belmont became a New York multi-millionaire and important social figure after her marriage to William Kissam Vanderbilt. She shocked the world in 1895 when she divorced Vanderbilt and married Oliver Hazzard Perry Belmont. After the death of her husband in 1908, Alva emerged as a feminist and reformer and was an important figure in the women's suffrage movement. She not only financed many parts of the women's movement but also wrote articles, marched in parades and organized rallies. She was also known for her energy, intelligence, strong opinions, and willingness to challenge the norm.

Florence Mills Thompson Singer, Dancer, And Comedian

Known as the "Queen of Happiness", Florence Mills Thompson was among the most popular entertainers in the 1920's. Mills was a singer, dancer, and vaudeville actress who starred in several productions in New York and London. Six carloads of flowers were brought to her grave. Over 10,000 people paid tribute to her at the funeral chapel and when she was laid to rest a plane flew over Woodlawn dropping rose petals on her grave.

Nellie Bly (1864-1922) - Journalist

At the age of nineteen, Elizabeth Cochrane Seaman "Nellie Bly" broke into journalism with a well-written and strong letter to the editor of the Pittsburgh Dispatch protesting an anti-suffrage editorial. After testing her on freelance assignments, the editor gave her a job as a reporter. She chose the by-line "Nelly Bly," after the Stephen Foster song. She became America's first investigative reporter, becoming famous for her undercover story on the condition of Mental Institutions for Joseph Pulitzer's The World.

Margaret Rudkin (1897-1967) - Entrepreneur

Margaret Rudkin was inspired to found Pepperidge Farm due to her son Mark's asthma. His reactions to preservatives and artificial ingredients prevented him from eating commercially prepared bread. She created her first product, a whole wheat bread, and offered it to the local doctor, who immediately ordered it to sell to his patients. Within four months, she was selling it in New York with her husband as delivery man. Soon she was distributing her bread across the country. Pepperidge Farm still exists today and makes breads and baked goods as well as snack foods like the famous Goldfish crackers.
